

Pat Intraversato

Pat Intraversato launched Iron Coaching in 2009 and has been coaching senior leaders for over 10 years. He is passionate about helping his clients develop strategies to transform how they lead and make an impact in their organization, while also providing street-worthy insight for today's issues.

Pat's clients span the range of entrepreneur to corporate leader to collegiate coach.

Pat's business mission to "to sharpen individuals in the critical skills needed to reach their career potential while living intentional, well-balanced lives." The name Iron Coaching was inspired by a favorite Bible verse, Proverbs 27:17, "as iron sharpens iron, so one man sharpens another."

Pat draws extensively on the skills, knowledge and lessons acquired in his 25-year career in sales, service, training and management with Fortune 500 companies Xerox Corporation, Sun Microsystems and Gateway Computer.

Pat started his career as a professional business coach in 2004 when he joined Building Champions and since then he has logged thousands of coaching hours. He is a certified facilitator in Situational Leadership II and the Strength Deployment Inventory (SDI) and a licensed KRH consultant.

Pat attended Boston College and Rutgers University. "Coach Pat" to many Little League players, he also sits on several non-profit boards and is active at his local church. His ideal vacation would include his wife and children, the sound of the ocean, access to ESPN and a good meal.

For more information on Pat and his coaching services, contact pat@ironcoaching.com.